

Youtube does have a nonprofit support, though it is still not completely clear how to set up a non profit account. There is a registration form. Hopefully it helps: <http://www.youtube.com/nonprofits> video editing via Windows Movie Maker. Those running windows XP and vista have a very nice free video editing tool called Windows Movie Maker that few people know about. It can add titles, cut video, insert images and audio tracks. Most importantly, it has the ability to compress video to various sizes based on quality. Once you have the videos, you still need to upload them somewhere. Hopefully youtube is available, otherwise consider some web hosting on school servers or some free online service.
